© Crown copyright • www.metoffice.gov.uk

Cold weather to bring more snow

3 December 2008

The wintry theme to the UK weather is expected to continue this week, with northern regions likely to see a spell of heavy snow and strong winds during Thursday morning.

Drifting snow could lead to difficult driving conditions especially over higher routes. The Met Office is working closely with road and rail organisations as well as local authorities to ensure all affected regions are fully prepared.

Latest forecast

UK warnings of severe weather

What to do in severe weather

Transport and flooding links